SPANISH PAINTINGS FROM THE CARNEGIE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITION OF 1936

FEBRUARY 7 TO FEBRUARY 28

NINETEEN HUNDRED AND THIRTY-SEVEN

This exhibition is the one pleasant result of the current Spanish conflict. Thirty-three paintings by Spanish artists shown in the Carnegie International Exhibition at Pittsburgh early this winter have remained in this country because of the difficulties of returning them to Spain. Many of the painters had left their homes and their present locations are either temporary, or in many cases, even unknown.

This group of paintings is the only one from the Carnegie International to be shown outside of Pittsburgh. The Foreign Section which we have exhibited in the Museum in alternate years is no longer circuited. The Museum, therefore, grasped this unexpected opportunity to show some of the contemporary European work here.

The Exhibition has added interest for us because of the friendly relations which have existed between our city and the other Toledo, and which through the Committee on Relations with Toledo Spain, has brought about cordial associations.

The paintings, with only a few exceptions, give no evidence of the troublous times through which Spain is passing. Most of them, on the contrary, are painted in high-keyed, brilliant colors and their subjects are serene, if not gay. Among the artists are Jose Mompou and Mariano Andreu, whose works are represented in the Museum's permanent collection. Others will be remembered from previous exhibitions.

Some of the paintings are for sale. Information regarding prices may be obtained at the Museum office.
